EF Hult Prize Brand and visual identity guidelines

PRIMARY LOGO

Two panels.
One trophy.

The mark abstracts the silhouette of the iconic EF Hult Prize trophy designed by Yves Béhar. Its flare and stem split into two panels that open upward like growth.

Constant: the dark panel, the EF Hult Prize wordmark, the geometry and the gap between panels.
Expression: the right panel fill.

The logo is never redrawn, re-set in another typeface, or rebuilt.
Use the supplied files only.

VERSIONS

Standard & inverted

Standard
For light backgrounds. Dark panel in Ink #150007, white wordmark, white EF logo + HIBS Shield in the expression panel.

Inverted
For dark or busy backgrounds. Panel turns paper-white, wordmark turns Ink.
The expression panel must keep clear contrast against the background.

Use the inverted version whenever the standard dark panel would sink into the background: dark photography, stage lighting, saturated gradients.

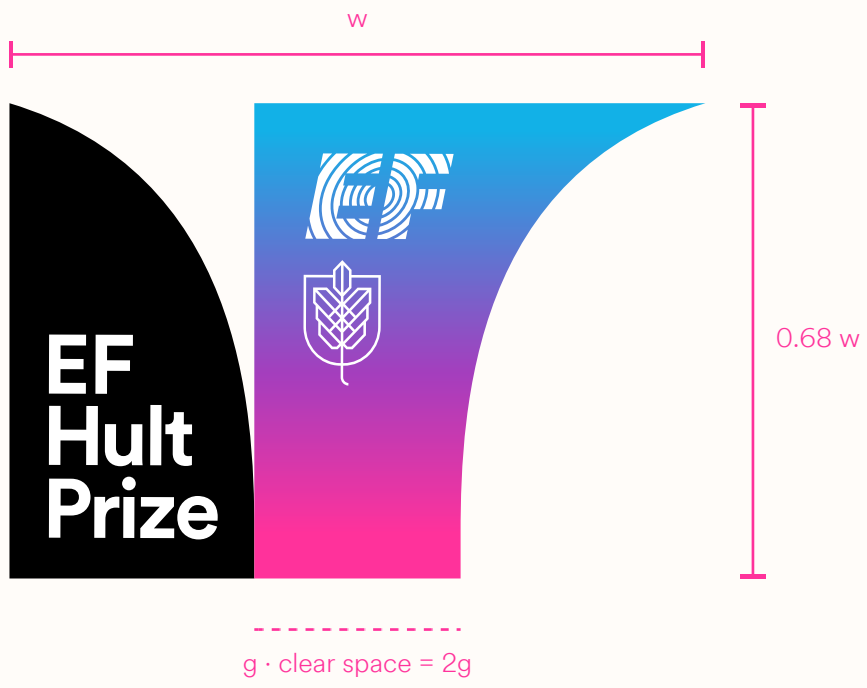

CONSTRUCTION, CLEAR SPACE & SIZE

Fixed geometry

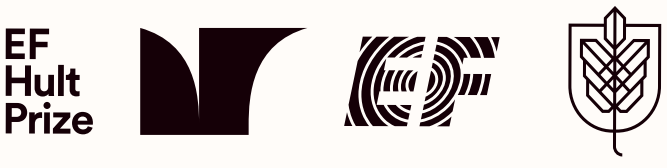

Panel proportions, curve radius and the gap are fixed and extracted directly from the master artwork. The unit g (the gap between panels at the baseline) defines the clear space: keep at least 2g free on all sides.

Minimum sizes: 70 px wide on screen · 20 mm in print (without embedded marks: 40 px / 12 mm).

These minimums carry over from the previous guides and apply per lockup, including partner lockups.

Atomized (Breaking down the logo)
Use this option only when the regular logo setup doesn’t work, like on very small items such as tiny leather embossing or lanyards. In these rare cases, the logo is split into separate parts: the wordmark, the silhouette, the EF logo and the HIBS Shield.

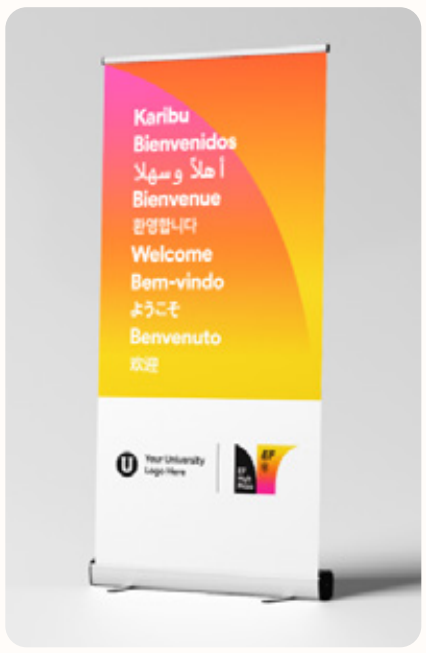

PARTNER LOCKUP

Side by side, separated by a bar

With universities, sponsors and host venues, the partner sits on the left and the EF Hult Prize mark on the right, separated by a vertical bar with a distance of 2g on each side. Both marks are optically matched in height; the partner never enters or touches the expression panel.

PHOTOGRAPHY

Real people, no stock. Ever.

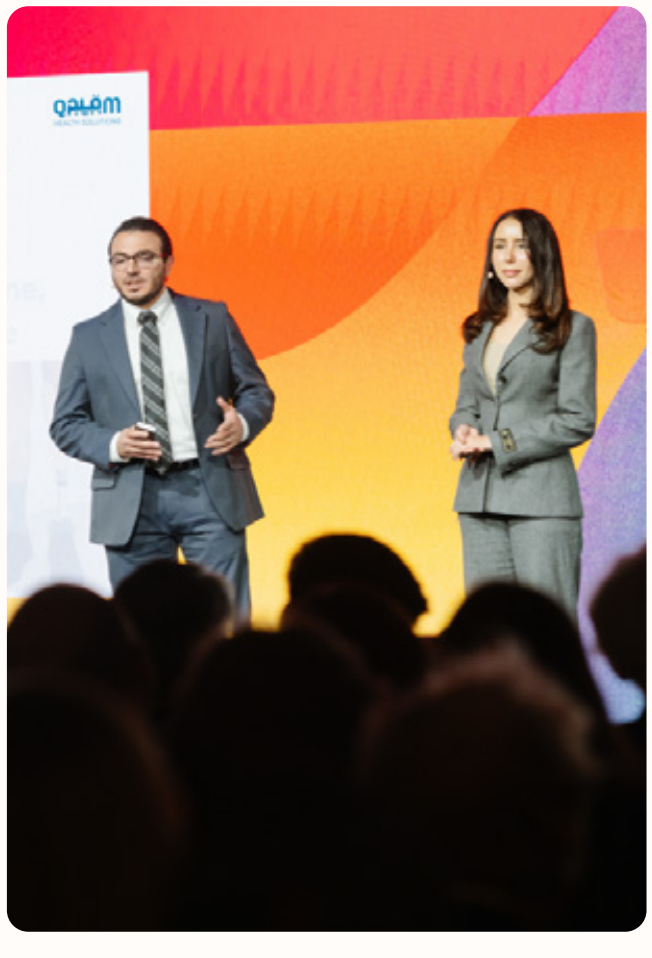

Candid: Competitors, judges and volunteers in action: pitching, judging, setting up, celebrating. High resolution, human, energetic, diverse.

At work: Student founders with their products, factories and teams. The proof that ideas became real.

SOCIAL MEDIA GUIDELINES

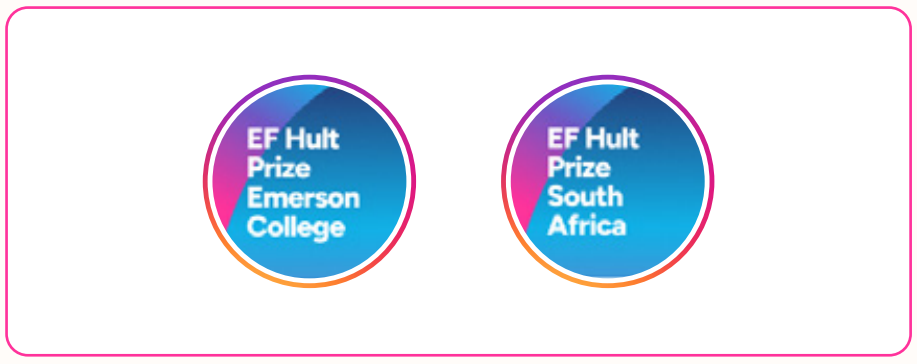

Official EF Hult Prize university, country/territory accounts

Visuals & naming: Our social media visuals and naming guidelines help you share the EF Hult Prize story clearly and consistently. Use these resources and guidelines to create engaging content that reflects our brand and connects with our global community.

The EF Hult Prize logo is reserved for official EF Hult Prize communications, including our global social media accounts and brand channels.

EF Hult Prize stakeholders should not use the EF Hult Prize logo on its own—especially for profile photos or social media avatars. Instead, please use your specific graphic, which reflects your team's official role in the program.

Important: Using the EF Hult Prize logo by itself may result in your account being mistaken for an impersonator account. To avoid confusion, always use the graphic set we provide.

Yes

No

Banner photos: For platforms that require a cover image or banner, we encourage you to use action shots from your local event. Showcase your team, participants, or audience in a dynamic moment that reflects the energy of the EF Hult Prize experience in your country/territory. Avoid using the EF Hult Prize logo or templated graphics as standalone banner images.

Naming conventions: To ensure clarity and consistency across our global network, please include your university or country/territory name in your social media bio or page title i.e.:

Avoid: EF Hult Prize at UAIT
Do: EF Hult Prize at the University of Advanced Innovation and Technology, Brazil

Avoid: EF Hult Prize BR
Do: EF Hult Prize Brazil

Using vague or abbreviated names can confuse followers and may result in your page being flagged or mistaken for an unofficial account.

RESOURCES

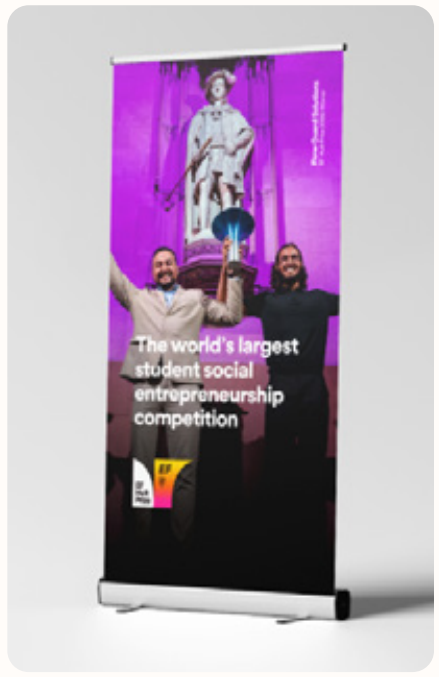

Templates everywhere

To support our global community, regardless of your team's design experience, we've created a flexible and easy-to-use set of brand assets. This year's materials come in a variety of color options pulled from the official EF Hult Prize palette, designed to reflect the energy, diversity, and creativity of our global community.

To ensure long-term usability and promote sustainability, we've removed event dates and the stage labels, allowing materials to be reused even if the stage name changes in the future, reducing the need for reprinting and minimizing waste.

Everything will be available on Canva, ready to use and adapt to your local needs.

Print assets + Swag: Our print assets are designed to deliver maximum impact in any setting, while remaining easy to customize for your local audience. From posters to banners, each piece aligns with EF Hult Prize brand standards to ensure a consistent presence worldwide.
The visuals provided serve as examples to guide your swag design. You are encouraged to create and produce items that reflect your local community, while adhering to our brand guidelines to maintain a consistent and authentic EF Hult Prize identity.

Digital Assets: Our digital assets are crafted to support your online presence with flexibility and consistency. Designed for easy customization, they ensure the Hult Prize brand is represented authentically across all digital platforms.
